

Title I, of the general provisions for the Communications Act of 1934 establishes creating the Federal Communications Commission, for the purpose of regulating interstate and foreign commerce in communications both wire and air. So to make available so far possible, to all the people of the United States. The (FCC) Created to regulate, execute and enforce the communications act of 1934 including sections as need be amended, including following direction of Congress, included in the (FCC's) responsibilities is to identify and eliminate "market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and other small businesses", to eliminate barriers for the purpose of the National defense, promoting safety of life and property to secure a more effective execution, centralizing authority to execute and enforce overseeing the success of regulating media in all platforms from wire to air.

Communications currently at an all new evolution of ability to serve and educate the general public. The foundation of regulation in mass media ownership secures the freedom of communications, allowing evolution as it has proven from 1934 into the tomorrow of now, because now more than ever do we live virtually intouch, a knowledge based world to improve and serve our communities. The foundation for the future of media ownership depends that regulation giving a solid foundation overseeing the various guidelines which has in the past and in the future offer a regulated outline to insure the protection of the general public. Communication regulation is beneficial to the public interest tomorrow as it has been in the past. Your voice representing the people in this current matter requires responsible management by the continued regulation of media markets so to insure the public interest and to insure small media organizations to have the ability to exist. Please consider where communications will arrive in the future, with or without guidance.